

Irevert downgrader is a piece of software which, while it will work to help you scale down your operating system due to the possible ramifications of running an out dated version, is mostly designed for people looking to migrate away from the increasingly monopolistic Microsoft Windows. The Windows 10 license can't be transferred to another machine without considerable cost, which makes it increasingly difficult for users who wish to upgrade their hardware in the future. This program solves that problem by allowing you to downgrade your current operating system without worry about compatibility or price. This downgrader is capable of downgrading Windows 7, 8, and 10 to Windows XP, Vista, or any version of Windows 95. It can be used on 32-bit or 64-bit computers. The program's website advertises it as being free to use. However, the software requires a one time purchase of €120 for the license key. The license key must be entered in the program before it can be used, although this is only necessary after installation on your computer. If you are using this software to downgrade from Windows 10 to an older version of Windows, you will need a Windows 7/8/10 ISO to use it. The ISO is available in the Irevert Downgrader forum. The program also deals in second hand software, which can be useful for people who want to continue using an older version of Windows or other program while upgrading to a newer computer or operating system.
